I read that as armed. If everyone commits to constitutional carry, then how can they stop us?

Drive or you can check them with restrictions, but then you'll have no ammo.

No one is coming.

It's up to us

I doubt they'd let anyone through the DC airport with a gun in the declared items but TSA regulations allow 50 rounds in their original purchased box if you follow all the other rules. What's his face deviant ollam does a youtube series about this and you can find it on thefirearmblog easier if anyone is curious about flying with guns. I'm 93% sure just landing at a DC airport without appropriate CC license slaps you with a felony gun charge but can't say for sure. I am 99% sure you shouldn't try flying with a gun if your destination is Boston or NYC. I can't speak about OuTlAwLyFe in regards to driving except that locked cases should have padding inside and there are best practices for interstate travel with guns you can read about. Be aware that in order to qualify for interstate travel protections, you can't stop in antigun states even to pee and you won't have protection at your destination (DC) only on the way there and back.

If you don't go armed cause it's illegal, just get on the cattle car the the concentration camp now and save everyone the time.
